THE NAME

A respelling of déjà vu. The customer sees their new face, goes through with it, then looks in a real mirror and has genuinely seen it before. We manufacture déjà vu on purpose.

DEZAVU

Déjà vu is remembering something that never happened.

Dezavu is remembering something that hasn't happened yet.

THE LINE

The only déjà vu you can plan.

SAYING IT

DEZ-a-voo

Dezavu in running text.
DEZAVU in the wordmark.

WHAT WE ARE

The product is not the screen and not the model. It is the removal of a gamble people currently take with their own face.

Not a mirror. Not a camera. A way to see it before you commit to it.

Every one of these decisions is currently made blind — you describe what you want, you hope, you find out afterwards. We remove the gamble.

A haircut you hate takes a month to grow out

Colour you hate takes weeks and damage to correct

Filler you hate takes six months to dissolve

A nose you hate is permanent

WHAT WE SELL

The try-on is the demo. It makes the owner say yes and the customer say wow.

WHAT THE BUSINESS IS

The customer record. Years of before and after. A salon with 800 of them cannot leave.

THE FOUR ROOMS

One platform, four very different rooms. Every piece of brand work has to survive all of them — and the hardest one decides.

Barbershop

Casual, male, social

CHAIR · $50/MO

Hair salon

Aspirational, emotional

STUDIO · $90/MO

Dental clinic

Clinical, trust-led

CLINIC · $300/MO

Aesthetic clinic

Premium, discreet, high-stakes

CLINIC+ · $500/MO

The aesthetic clinic sets the register.

If it works in a surgeon's consultation room it works everywhere. The reverse is never true — put slang in that room and the practice looks cheap, and you lose the account that pays the most.

TEST EVERY PIECE OF WORK

Say it out loud in all four rooms. “Welcome to Dezavu.” “We use Dezavu for all our consultations.” If the second one makes you wince, it does not ship.

LOGO

The primary mark. Flat, single colour, no effects — it has to survive being laser-etched, embroidered, faxed and rendered at 16 pixels.

D E Z A V U

A WORDMARK, NO SYMBOL

Allergan, Juvéderm, Restylane, Galderma — almost every brand you sit beside in a clinic is a wordmark. A wordmark cannot be misread.

TYPEFACE

IBM Plex Sans Medium, uppercase, tracking +0.34em. Outlined for production.

COLOUR

Ink #1A1917 on light, Cream #F7F5F1 on dark. Never sage, never anything else.

LOGO VERSIONS

Four files, four jobs. No other variations are permitted — no lockup with a tagline, no badge, no alternate colourway.

PRIMARY

Default. Any light ground — device bezel, documents, proposals.

REVERSED

Ink grounds and dark UI. Never straight onto a photograph.

ECHO — SECONDARY

Website header, first slide, the box. Never below 120px wide.

MONOGRAM

App icon and favicon only, below 72px. Never as the company logo.

CLEAR SPACE & MINIMUM SIZE

The mark needs room and it needs a floor. Below the minimum the tracking closes up and it stops reading as a wordmark.

CLEAR SPACE = THE CAP HEIGHT OF THE D

X is the height of the capital D. Nothing — no text, no rule, no image edge — enters that band.

MINIMUM SIZE

In print the wordmark never sits below 18mm wide. On the device bezel it is etched at roughly 9px cap height.

LOGO MISUSE

Six things that will happen if this page does not exist. Each of these was drawn deliberately so you can see exactly what is being forbidden.

NO SHADOW

NO STRETCHING

NO RECOLOURING

NO ROTATION

NO ENCLOSING SHAPE

NO EYE, EVER

WHY NO SHADOW, SPECIFICALLY

The mark gets laser-etched into a white bezel, embroidered on a cape, screen-printed on a box and rendered at 16px. A shadow survives none of it. On hardware, depth comes from etching the surface — a real shadow and a real catchlight — which the industrial designer specifies. The artwork stays flat.

WHY NO EYE

The evil eye is a live belief across Iraq and the Gulf, not decoration. And an eye on a camera says surveillance — arguing against us in the exact moment we need a nervous customer to trust us.

COLOUR

Four neutrals and one accent. The restraint is the point — one colour that means something beats five that mean nothing.

ACCENT — PRODUCT INTERFACE ONLY

Sage
#566349
The after — light
5.89:1 AA

Sage Light
#9DB07F
The after — dark
7.49:1 AAA

The brand is cream and ink. Sage never appears in the logo, on packaging, on the website, or on the device.

It lives only inside the interface, where it means exactly one thing: this is the after. Because it is the only colour in the system, the customer learns it in about three seconds without anyone explaining it.

Sage sits near 100° on the wheel. Skin tones live at 15–30°, so a warm accent — bronze, clay, terracotta — blends into a photograph of a face and stops reading as interface. That is why the accent is not warm.

THE NEUTRAL BEHIND A FACE

Product accuracy, not taste. The area immediately surrounding a customer photograph carries no colour at all.

CORRECT — #2E2E2E
Pure neutral. Dark mode, the device default.

CORRECT — #8C8C8C
Pure neutral. Light mode, for daylight rooms.

WRONG — CREAM
Warm cast. Every result reads warmer than it will be.

WRONG — SAGE
Colour cast pulls the skin green.

Our promise is “this is what you will look like.” A tinted surround makes that a lie.

Professional photo tools use neutral grey surrounds for exactly this reason. Equal red, green and blue — no cast in either direction. This is the one colour rule that may never be overruled for aesthetic reasons, and it matters more on white hardware, because a white bezel bounces warm salon lighting back onto the screen.

TYPOGRAPHY

One family, two scripts, five roles. Chosen for licence cost and bilingual fidelity before aesthetics.

IBM Plex Sans

Open licence — no per-device cost across hundreds of installations. Latin and Arabic designed as one family, so a bilingual interface does not look bolted together.

CHECK BEFORE SHIPPING

Kurdish Sorani uses Arabic script plus ܠܐ ܕܝܠܐ ܕܝܠܐ. Many Arabic fonts omit them, and you find out when a salon owner in Erbil sees empty boxes. Verify Sorani coverage in the font file — Noto Sans Arabic is the fallback.

THE DEVICE

A portable camera screen that stands beside the chair. White, quiet, and branded once.

White housing. Ink wordmark on the bottom bezel, small. Nothing else.

DARK SCREEN, WHITE BODY

The most premium hardware language there is — it is the entire iPhone and iPad look. It also solves the dim-salon problem, so dark mode is the default and light mode the exception. That is the opposite of what most software does, and it is deliberate.

THE WORDMARK IS ETCHED, NOT PRINTED

Laser-etched or debossed gives a hairline of real shadow and a hairline of real catchlight, so the mark reads as cut into the surface rather than stuck onto it. A printed shadow on a real object fights the room's own light and immediately looks cheap.

NO ACCENT ON HARDWARE

Sage never touches the housing. It is reserved for the screen, where it means the after.

THE INTERFACE

Where the accent lives. Three screens showing the whole product loop: take the before, choose the after, come back and repeat it.

Capture. The neutral grey surround is visible from the first screen, and so is the privacy line — answering the objection before it is raised.

Before / after. Watch the sage: the AFTER chip, the divider, the chosen thumbnail, the confirm button. The customer learns the colour in seconds.

History. Light mode. The button reads Do it like two weeks ago — the retention feature, in one tap.

Sage marks the after and nothing else. It never decorates, never fills a header, never appears twice on a screen for two different meanings.

THE BOX

DEZAVU

ALWAYS

Cream or ink ground. Generous margin. One mark per surface. In a partner salon the decal is never larger than the salon's own branding — we are the tool, not the tenant.

NEVER

Dezavu branding over a customer's face. The wordmark on a photograph without a solid plate behind it. Any “results” image that is not a real, consented, unretouched capture.

THE BOX, SPECIFICALLY

Cream board, wordmark debossed, nothing printed inside. The device is white — let the two whites differ deliberately rather than trying, and failing, to match them.

CONSENT & THE PROMISE

The rule that outranks every other rule in this document. No customer photograph exists without it.

Brand and product are the same thing here. The promise is the design.

Three separate permissions, captured on the device, in the customer's own language, before the shutter. Never bundled into one checkbox.

Store this photo on this device
Local only. Nothing leaves the premises.

Show it to me on future visits
Turns on the archive and “like last time”.

Use it in this salon's marketing
Separate, revocable, and revoking it pulls the photo from any export.

MEDICAL AND SURGICAL SIMULATION
Carries a visible, unavoidable “not a guarantee of outcome” disclaimer in Arabic, Kurdish and English, acknowledged before the result is shown. This is not fine print. It appears at full size, in the interface, every time.

PHOTOS STAY ON THE DEVICE

Local-first is not a marketing claim, it is the architecture. Say it on the first screen, not in settings. In a market where a salon holds photographs of women's faces, this is the difference between a sale and a polite no.
